Here at the State Procurement Office (SPO) we hope that everyone's new year is off to a great start. We are excited to present our first ever newsletter! Every quarter, SPO's Arizona Procurement Quarterly (APQ) will provide information about upcoming procurement events, changes in policy and any other information relevant to procurement within the State. This newsletter, along with any future issues can be accessed at: <http://spo.az.gov/>.

Ushering in a New Era: Procurement Reform

Ensuring a consistent, fair and transparent process: This is the goal of Arizona Procurement Reform (House Bill 2599), which became effective on September 13, 2013. Inspired by Governor Brewer's four cornerstones of reform during the 2013 legislative session, the bill allows for much needed updates to the Arizona Procurement Code, originally adopted in 1984. With the direction of the Arizona Department of Administration (ADOA) and the State Procurement Office (SPO), Procurement Reform is delivering greater quality and value to the citizens of Arizona through transparency, accountability, efficiency and cost savings.

Procurement Reform will benefit taxpayers by providing cost savings through aggregate buying, speeding up purchasing processes and eliminating redundancies. One example is piggy-back purchasing, which allows the state to purchase from other local governments' and nationwide cooperative contracts.

The bill also expanded the definition of lobbying to include attempting to influence the procurement of materials services or construction, and defined significant procurement roles among employees to eliminate a potential conflict of interest. See page 3 for information about Significant Procurement Role.

Under Procurement Reform, the ADOA's authority is expanded to enhance policy implementation and provide management in order to heighten consistency in public procurement across the vast network of state agencies. This includes establishing a compliance program (see page 3 for more information) and developing a training and certification program that will be mandatory for all state procurement professionals. Both the compliance and training programs are scheduled to launch in July 2014.

Please visit the Procurement Reform page on SPO's website: <http://www.spo.az.gov/ProcurementReform/index.html>. While you're there, click on "2013 AZ Procurement Reform CBT" under Reform News to view the online training module.

We hope you share in our enthusiasm as we continue to implement HB2599, which is sure to have widespread and lasting implications for procurement in the State of Arizona.

Get to Know SPO

A document standardization initiative is in progress at the State Procurement Office. The project will result in a consistent, uniform look and feel for all SPO communications, including solicitations, amendments, and business communications. Staff from across SPO are participating in the team effort.

State Procurement Administrator, Jean A. Clark Retiring

Over the last 30 years, Jean Clark has made vast contributions in the field of public procurement at both the local and state levels. She has served for over nine years with the Arizona State Procurement Administrator responsibilities, and as the Deputy for four years prior.

Jean currently serves in the role of Treasurer on the Universal Public Procurement Certification Council Governing Board, and previously held the positions of President of the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing (NIGP), Inc., President of the Arizona State Capitol Chapter of NIGP, and President of the National Electronic Commerce

Coordinating Council. Over her career, Jean has received the prestigious National NIGP Buyer of the Year Award and is the only procurement professional to be named the National NIGP twice. In 2011 she received the Albert H. Hall Memorial Award, NIGP's highest recognition for her lifetime contributions to the public procurement profession, and in 2012 received the Public Policy Leader of Year Award for Government. We thank Jean for all her great service to the State and wish her luck in all of her future endeavors!

With Procurement Reform, the Arizona State Purchasing Cooperative is now open to nonprofit organizations.

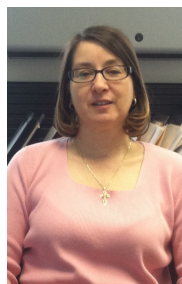

In total, the co-op membership boasts 278 educational institutions, 161 political subdivisions and 116 nonprofit organizations.

The co-op's spend for fiscal year 2013 was over $307 million, with over 350 vendors.

Learn more about membership by clicking "Cooperative Procurement" on SPO's website: <http://spo.az.gov>.

Deputy State Procurement Administrator, Barbara Corella

On January 6, 2014, Barbara M. Corella, formerly Support Services Branch Chief at the Arizona Game and Fish Department, became the Deputy State Procurement Administrator. Barbara has a wealth of knowledge and experience including stints with ADOA's State Procurement Office ('89-'98), the Governor's Office for Excellence ('98-'00) and multiple roles at Game and Fish ('00-'14).

Barbara holds an MBA from the University of Phoenix and an undergraduate degree in Purchasing/Material Management from Arizona State. She has earned a number of professional designations and has been active with the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing.

Welcome aboard, Barbara!

Strategic Contracts: Unlocking Purchasing Power for AZ

The State Procurement Office has provided cooperative contract opportunities to members since the early 1980's. We continue to improve and expand our contract portfolio offering to meet changing demands.

Our goal has always remained constant: To acquire services, commodities, equipment and construction at a competitive price, while ensuring a consistent, fair and transparent procurement process.

The following statewide contracts will be awarded soon:

- Industrial Supplies - tentative award January 31, 2014
- Equipment Maintenance Services - tentative award January 29, 2014
- Cloud Services - tentative award February 2014

SPO's Strategic Contracts team is also currently soliciting for PC Hardware to replace the current WSCA PC Hardware contract. Other pending solicitations include Document Imaging and IT Research Services.

Significant Procurement Role

The State Procurement Office has issued a new Technical Bulletin for Significant Procurement Role (SPR), reflecting changes to the definition of SPR as a result of Procurement Reform.

To help clarify the changes, SPO has answered the most common questions about SPR in a document available on the Procurement Reform website:

<http://www.spo.az.gov/ProcurementReform/index.html>.

Additionally, SPO is developing an online training module to help State employees, vendors and lobbyists learn more about what Significant Procurement Role means. The computer-based training will be available on the Procurement Reform website beginning February 1, 2014.

“Does significant procurement role involve anyone that touches any aspect of a procurement?”

No. Significant procurement role includes the procurement staff assigned the specific solicitation, evaluation team members, and technical advisors. Additionally, employees required to sign a nondisclosure agreement, having access to confidential information or deliberations, determining which suppliers to contact for quotes, determining or approving the specifications, preparing an evaluation tool or the importance of the evaluation criteria, or determining which supplier to award have a significant procurement role. Employees having a significant procurement role must file SPO Forms 110 or 120, depending on their normal job duties and the particular solicitation. Non-state employees are required to file a conflict of interest disclosure.

View more answers to common SPR questions, visit the Procurement Reform website at <http://www.spo.az.gov/ProcurementReform/index.html>.

The State of Compliance in Arizona Procurement

The development of SPO's new compliance program is well underway! A special THANK YOU to all of the CPOs and their delegates who have spent many hours participating in compliance focus groups as we have fine-tuned several aspects of the program. Your efforts help make this a program that is valuable to everyone.

The pilot compliance program is anticipated to begin March 1st, 2014 in SPO, with full rollout July 1st, 2014. Some of the key components of the program will include a rebuild of the compliance webpage as a focused hub of resources and updates, a new “E-Comply” link for compliance reporting, self-assessment tools, and a Procurement Performance Review based on a schedule determined by the State Procurement Administrator.

Emphasis at all stages of the compliance program is placed heavily on training and collaboration. In a coordinated effort with SPO's new Chief Learning Officer, the compliance program is geared to identify, and remedy, training needs in the field. Finally, the compliance program is not exclusive to internal monitoring, but will also include elements to help identify and address non-compliance and training needs of our vendor community.
